Socrates - Spyros Kolios

To whom it may concern,

I originally knew Dimitrios as an instructor, as I used to be a student of his in the "Metamorfosi Vocational Training Institute of Athens".

What distinguishes him from other instructors is the high level of knowledge on both theoretical and hands-on levels of his subject accompanied with the ability to communicate it in a simple and concise way.

Once I found out about this course I was eager to sign up, both because I believe that back end technologies exposure is a good addition to my skills set, also because of my interest in the Rails environment as a very flexible programming language with many web design applications.

In the four weeks of the course I was exposed to the Ruby on Rails environment. Course's material was well prepared and relevant to a web designer's needs and perspective. Additionally Dimitrios was able to divert and answer related questions, even not strictly relevant to the curriculum: Things like the history of the RoR, its most common uses and several pros over other programming languages were a welcome addition that made the lesson enjoyable and acted as a perfect introduction to Ruby on Rails.

I would definitely recommend this course to web designers like me that are looking for an easy and concise way to introduce Ruby on Rails in their skill-set.

Please feel free to contact me if you need further information.
